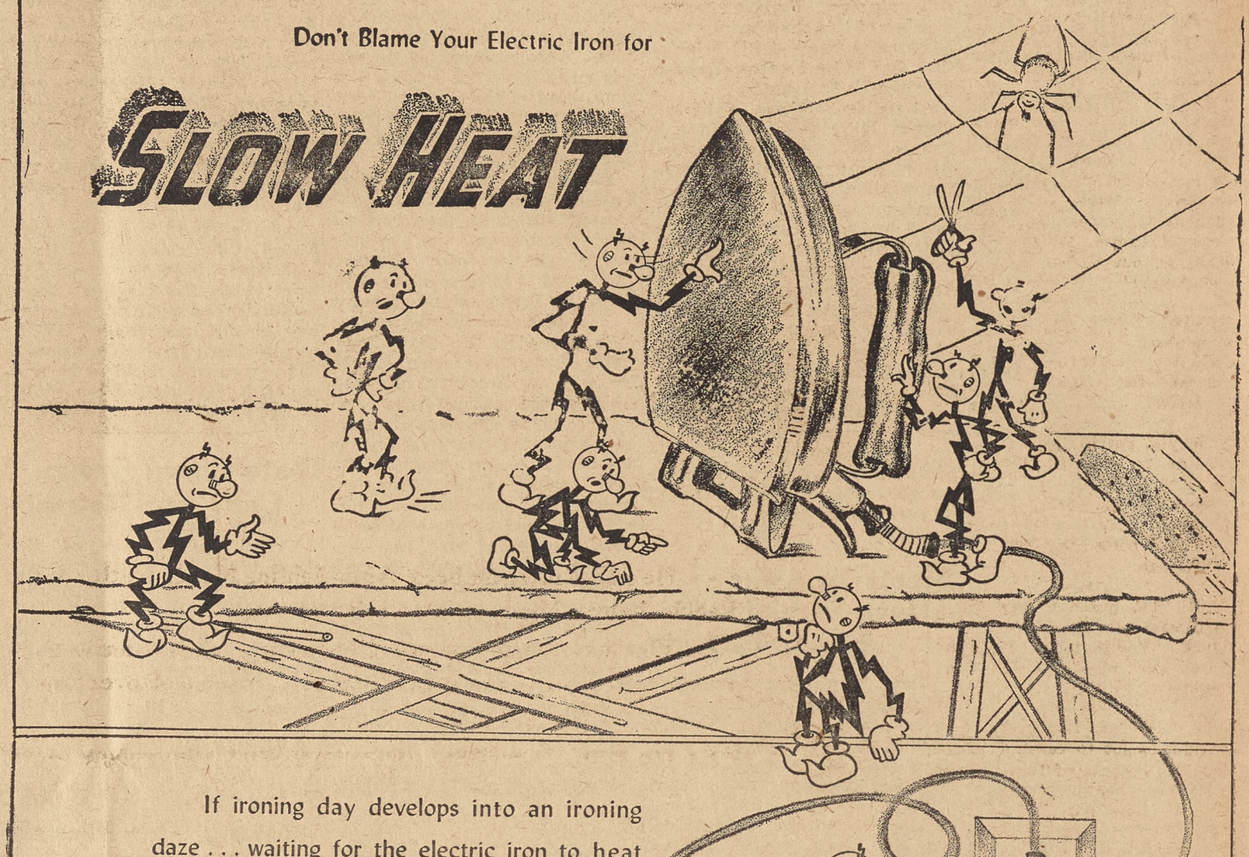
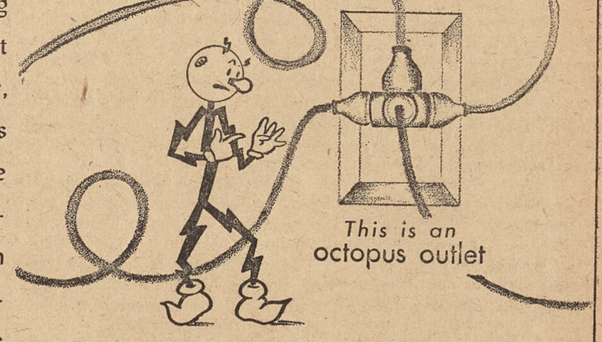
Don't Blame Your Electric Iron for
SLOW HEAT



If ironing day develops into an ironing daze . . . waiting for the electric iron to heat and reheat . . . as you tackle the heavier, damper clothes . . . don't blame the iron, it's probably plugged into an octopus outlet (see picture) and must compete with other appliances for a meager share of electricity. When too many appliances are plugged into one outlet, fuses blow out, lights become dim or irons won't heat. If appliances do not receive enough current, they must work "overtime" to do the same job, causing higher electric bills.



You can overcome these expensive difficulties in your new postwar home by installing many more electrical outlets than you now think you will need. Remember, tomorrow's world of television and automatic laundries will also bring with it many new appliances that are as yet undreamed of . . . and you will want most of these new appliances in your postwar home.

He can't ask you now!

• • • He's an American hero. After fighting bloody battles in the Pacific, he was home on leave two years ago.

• • • You may remember seeing his picture. His name is John Basilone, Marine Gunnery Sergeant. He traveled all over America, urging every American to buy more bonds.

• • • He said: "You don't know—you can't know—how much it means to the boys out there when they hear the folks back home have just put another War Bond Drive over the top."

• • • They gave him the Congressional Medal of Honor and offered him a commission. He didn't want it. "I'm a plain soldier," he said. "I want to stay one."

• • • Well, he stayed a plain Marine—like Joe and Bill and the fellows down the street. He can't ask you to buy bigger bonds during the Seventh. He was killed a few weeks ago on Iwo, just after he had led his assault team to the edge of an airfield we needed desperately.

• • • We can't let him and all our other fighting heroes down. Remember, last year we had two War Loan Drives by this time.

The Seventh is our personal call to arms—two drives in one. That's why our quota is large.

EARLY PRIMARY—

California's 1946 primary election, moved up to facilitate soldier voting, will be held on June 4, under the provisions of a bill signed last week by Governor Warren.

We are glad that the necessary steps have been taken to enable service men and women to participate in the primary, not only because they certainly deserve the right of franchise, but also because we believe the votes of the boys on the firing line may have a healthy influence on the election.

VETERANS HOSPITAL EXPOSE—

The reports by veterans organizations of poor conditions in various veterans hospitals throughout the nation are shot with one significant undercurrent.

Bad food, low morale, inefficient operation, overcrowding, inadequate recreation, arrogant administration and medical and surgical lacks are charged in nearly all instances to the handicap of "bureaucratic control, official red tape and regimentation."

There is no lack of money, certainly for the imperative purpose of taking proper care of our veterans. With the appointment of General Bradley, veteran of this war, as head of the Veterans' Administration, there should be a complete housecleaning and thorough reorganization.

"Veterans are thoroughly sick of those tactics when they get their discharge papers," declared Fred Kraft, our assemblyman, as the legislature adjourned last week. "That is why we refused at this session to embroil the people in any compulsory plan of medical insurance."

If we are not to deal shabbily with our fighting men, conditions in many of the veterans hospitals must certainly be improved. Only high type hospital personnel, relieved of some of the bureaucratic, paper-pushing chores that impede the job they really want to do, can help this nation discharge its solemn obligations to its veteran sons.

MRS. RALPH SCOTT, Principal

Account Of Flight Over Bombed Areas Of Europe Given

Destruction Beggars Description Says Sergeant

Writing to his wife, Mrs. S. M Fly of 4852 Long Branch Ave. Sgt. Shelby M. Fly gives a detailed and thrilling description of the destruction of the bombed areas in Europe which he observed in a seven-hour flight on VE day, on a round trip by air from England, where he had been on duty as assistant chaplain with an Eighth Air Force Bombardment group. Herewith follows the main paragraphs of his letter:

"From St. Omer, we flew a straight line to Duisburg, Germany, passing Dunkerque, France; Ghent, Belgium; and Antwerp. Dunkerque was rather interesting to us not only for its associations with the stories of the British Army's heroic evacuation of France in 1940, but because the German Garrison there had not capitulated, even though it was the official VE Day. All along the way through France, Belgium and Holland, flags of each country were flying in the brisk wind, making a bright spot of color over each quaint little farm house as well as throughout the cities and towns. People on the ground—little groups of returning refugees would look up and wave to us as we passed overhead. We could imagine not only that in that wave they were perhaps saying "Thank You" to us, but that at that moment we represented to them a symbol of the forces of their liberation from the horrors of war close to home.

"Over Germany it was different. Here was such destruction as no one could begin to imagine. In spite of all we had read—in spite of all the pictures we had seen, it had been impossible for us to visualize how bad it was. There were the same small groups of refugees wending their way back to their shattered homes, but here were no friendly waves and no smiles. To them we represented not the symbol of their liberation, but rather the symbol of the Conqueror's might which had swept over and thru their country leaving nothing but battle-scarred ground and piles of debris where once had been their farm-lands and great industrial cities. We were, as one fellow said, "Rubbing it in"—the grim reminder of their complete defeat.

"I mentioned the 'Battle-scarred Ground." That is a weak word. It cannot be adequately described by such—they seem almost inane when used to tell of such torn ground. Even when I attempt to describe the vast craters torn from the French coast, for example, by the hug eleven ton British bomb when they were attempting to stop the attacks on London by the V-1 Flying bomb—craters so large that smaller bombs and artillery shells have since made what seem to be very tiny craters within the original crater itself. Literally you could say 'Craters on top of Craters'—or perhaps more literally, 'Craters within craters', so close together that they seem to be overlapping, and in fact do overlap in many instances. Even when I tell of ground ploughed up by deep-rutted tank tracks as those monsters of war wheeled and spun around in the fields, as they maneuvered around trying to get at death-grips with each other; or even as I describe the great lines of zig-zag trenches slashing across the fields, surrounded by great gun emplacements and the whole area pock-marked by bomb and shell craters—it still does not present an accurate picture of what we saw. Anything you might have read in your newspapers, or anything I might say about this or the desolation wrought in the Rhineland cities will not begin to present the whole picture. Just visualize the worst destruction that you can imagine, double or even triple it, and then you might have an approximate idea what it is like over there now.

"At Duisburg, we first saw the Rhine. A wide, sluggish river with its banks littered with the ruins and rubble of the recent battles which had taken place along that sector. The city was nothing but a large pile of rubble. We flew low over it and circled for the benefit of those of us who had cameras. Then we went on East to Essen and buzzed low over the ruins of what had once been the Great Krupp armament factories, and the marshalling yards where our men had many times gone to drop their loads of bombs. Then we went back to the Rhine and followed it up to Cologne where we circled for about five minutes to allow us to get all the pictures we wanted of the ruins of the city and some shots of the Cathedral. It is amazing that the Cathedral building is still standing almost entirely unharmed, while all around it as close as just across the street is nothing but piles of stone and concrete. It is a wonderful example of the accuracy of our bombers.

"Then on up the river to Koblenz, over to Frankfurt and then to Ludwigshafen and Mannheim, called the Twin Cities of Germany. In all that distance up the river, we had seen only 2 bridges which were not completely destroyed, but a military pontoon bridge had been thrown up for army use at two points. These bridges used the deserted river barges for pontoons and seemed to be quite solid—we saw a convoy of heavy trucks passing over one of them.

"There were, of course, a few incidental sidelights to the trip which did not seem to fit into their proper place in the story. At one place, the pilot called out attention to one of the huge flak-towers which had been used to mount the anti-aircraft guns. We had often wondered how the men of our crew felt as they flew so low over this country where so very recently they had been forced to fly at 30,000 feet for any sort of safety at all. And even at that height there were many planes that failed to return as a result of the marksmanship of the men in those towers. At this particular tower, we all knew that at least twelve of our own planes had gone down under their deadly accuracy, and here we were flying at a mere 400 feet, right in front of it! I dare say that there wasn't a one of us that didn't have the disturbing thought: 'I hope that some fanatical Nazi hasn't gotten into that tower and found a stray round of ammunition.' "

Red Cross is calling for new or practically new books, books that our service men in the South Pacific would like to read. Please look over your library and see if you have a late book or two they might like, or buy a book for them, also please bring in late magazines, May or June issues to send. This reading matter is badly needed and you can call Miss Martha Nye at Camp & Hospital F-8871 or call me at B-5639.

Many thanks to all who have so generously answered our call for cards, card tables, balls and articles for the new Recreation Center. We got in everything we were asked to donate.

Thanks to all the cake and cookie bakers but remember Wednesday is Cookie Day.

We have sugar and fats at the Center, 4769 Del Monte Ave. Sugar, 2 pounds 14 cents and "Jewel" at 20 cents a pound. No red points or sugar stamps needed but these foods must be used to bake for the hospital boys.

Mrs. Albert Jones tells me they still want fishing tackle badly, also teaspoons. Perhaps you ladies have odd teaspoons that do not match your set. If so will you please donate them.
